Andrea Canclini is a Lecturer in Architecture at the School of Architecture of Lancaster University, he previously taught Design Studio and Theory in Contemporary Architectural Design at Politecnico di Milano and at Beirut Arab University, and he's an international practising architect and ARB and RIBA member.

His interest in theory led him, after the Master of Architecture at Politecnico di Milano, to receive a Bachelor in Philosophy in the field of Aesthetics, and a PhD in History, Theory and Criticism of Architecture at the Politecnico di Torino, with a research on the influences of French Thought on US architectural discourse during the Seventies, conducted in the archives and library of the main US universities, and meeting the protagonists of that intellectual adventure.

He has attended and organised several international conferences and published on the relationship between modern and contemporary architectural design and its cultural foundations, the theory of sustainable architecture, and about architecture of emergencies, borders, refugees.
